Ayer's Hair Vigor keeps the hair soft and pliant, imparts to it the lustre and freshness of youth, causes it to grow luxuriantly, eradicates Dandruff, cures all scalp diseases, and is the most cleanly of all hair preparations.

AYER'S Hair Vigor has given me perfect satisfaction. I was nearly bald for six years, during which time I used many hair preparations, but without success. Indeed, what little hair I had, was growing thinner, until I tried Ayer's Hair Vigor. I used two bottles of the Vigor, and my head is now well covered with a new growth of hair.

Ayer's Hair Vigor stopped the falling, and restored my hair to its original color. As a dressing for the hair, this preparation has no equal.—Mary N. Hammond, Stillwater, Minn.

If you have all, or any considerable number of these symptoms, you are suffering from that most common of American matadies—Billous Dyspepsia, or Torpial Liver, associated with Dyspepsia, or Torpial Liver, associated with Dyspepsia, or Indigestion. The more complicated your disease has become, the greater the number and diversity of symptoms. No matter what stage it has reached, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will subdue it, if taken according to directions for a reasonable length of time. If not cured, complications multiply and Consumption of the Lungs, Skin Disease, or other grave maladies are quite liable to set in and, sooner or later, induce a fatal termination.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery acts powerfully upon the Liver, and through that great blood-traints and impurities, from whatever cause arising, It is equally effications in acting upon the Kidneys, and other excretory organs, cleansing, strengthening, and healing their diseases. THE BLUE AND GRAY. Harmonious Blending of Colors and Sentiments at Evansville, Ind., Yesterday.

Union Veterans and Ex-Confederates Mutually Agree that the War is Over --Governor Gray's Speech.

EVANSVILLE. Ind., Sept. 22.—The regconfederate veterans present at the reunion. Enthusiasm and general good feel-ing prevails. There is a decided tendency upon the part of the veterans of both ally ignore former hatreds and strife.

The sensation of the day yesterday was the speech of General Wheeless, of Nashvilla Mr. Wheeless closed a most elo uent oration with the following antithesis of General Fairchilds' famous denuncia tion of the confederate flag transaction by President Cleveland: "God bless the brain that conceived the thought of this reunion of the blue and gray and; God bless Farragut Fost for making it a grand necess; and, God bless our country and make us one people now and forever."
The point though made without seeming intention, was immediately recognized by the audience, who, catching the spirit of the words, took them up and ochood and reechoed the blessing and made the welkin ong with their applause.

Company A, First regiment I. N. G., of the Emerald Cadets, of St.

and fifteen more G. A. R. posts arrived R. Wood, Alphama. The speakers were: General Johnson, General Wheeless, Green B. Raum, of Illinois; Coional W. B. Wood and Geo. W. Peck, of Milwaukee.

Governor Gray, in his speech, said: "What does this gathering mean? What is the significance of this reunion of the soldiers who were the blue and those who struggle was based have been buried; that that it is over for the living as well as the his mother, his orphans and his sister. It marks an era of fraternity. It says what all the world knows, that civil war is put away forever."

Fully thirty thousand persons were present and listened to Governor Gray's address, and from that time until when Private Peck had delivered his address, the parade grounds and amphitheater were densely packed.

were densely packed.

Strict vigilance is maintained by the police, and nothing has as yet occurred to mar the festivities. All the speeches delivered so far have breathed the fraternal spirit of true Americanism, and both Northern and Southern men appland patriotic utterances to the echo. It is affecting to see the old soldiers exhibiting their wounds to their old enemies and sympathizing with them in turn at the re-lation of some tale of suffering. In the industrial parade to-day the exhibit terests will alone cover two miles, one bundred floats and fifty display wagons being required for the purpose. Various other displays will stretch the whole parade over thirteen miles.

The Threatened West Division Street Railway Strike. CHICAGO, Sept. 22.—The indications are now that the expected strike of employes pany will be avoided by a commonise. A committee of the men had an interview with the superintendent of the company yesterday afternoon when the superin-tendent stated that he had been author-ized by the president to offer as a compromise twenty-one cents per hour, in stend of the twenty-two cents demanded. It is likely that the men will accept the compromise and gain one cent an hour rather than take the risk of a strike.

Parsons, one of the condemned Avarchists, sept for s reporter yesterday, and gave him for publication a long statement in which he denies that he was an accessory before the fact to the murder of Policeman Degan on May 4, 1886. He says his published speeches were mainly given from excited imagination of newspaper reporters, and were garbled and misquoted, and that the Supreme Court has condemned him to death for incendiary uttorances he never made. The incendiary articles in the Alarm, edited by him, he says, were most-ly written by others. Parsons argues his case at great length, but presents nothing especially new. He finishes by declaring that he should prefer death to imprison Private Insane Asvium Burned. Fleeting Cities - The Palaces and Stables of Royalty-Handsome Vienness

VIENNA, Austria, Sept. 2.—There is a kind of a half unexpressed opinion among Europeans that Austria is one of the powers only by sufferance, yet her capital is the handsomest city we have seen, and there be those who assert that even Paris, the beautiful, is adumbrated (if you know what that means) by her dazzling spiendor. I can't say as to that, for we are saving Paris for the last, and have not been there, but knowing Vienna, I do not know how Pariscan be fluer. Making a combination, however, Paris and Vienna, cities in Europe. As a power, France is held in much the same esteem that Austria is, and is possible that there is something por-ntous in the beauty of those two great I don't know much about even our

We have been doing the palaces of the po tentates since getting back into the countries under a throne, and I am daily more and more impressed with the fact that a palace i ind a "floral hall" building at a country fair or a last year's circus wagon. It doesn't sur-prise me a bit when I look around and walk around these rickety old places that Ludwig of Bavarla went crazy, and that his mania was building new palaces. It's a wonder to me that the entire race of rulers don't follow in shake of the head, and when you go to visit ish you are charged from one to six marks entrance money. That's the only use they have for the palaces now, and they hope in time to take in enough money at the gate to lift the mortgages on the buildings, or words

Royalty in this regard is just a little unroyal, so to speak, and it smally costs 50 plennigs (12)4 cents) to visit a royal stable, a royal library, a royal temb, or some other ndergrowth of the crown. It isn't in the nature of a fee either, but a straight out pur-chase of a ticket at the door, just the same as reus wagons I ever saw; Barnum's best not copted, was the late Ludwin's state pleas are carriages in Munich; price, 59 plennigs. Ludwig was liberal, and he didn't hesitate to spend as high as 50,000 marks on a carriage or sleigh, and some of them are "daisies," as Dickey would say. The lamps are electric, the panels are painted by famous artists, and the gilding and statuary scattered about them are perfectly starbling. The royal palace in Vienna is a hard looking old concern, as usual, but Francis Joseph, without going crazy, is building a new one which it will take thirty live years to com plate, and a good many of the people's dollars to pay for, but they like it, and I am satisfied they are. We visited the royal stables here, too, where a couple of hundred horses are kept for riding and driving, and I didn't see an American horse. I did see one, though, with the name Napoleon on the stall, and I pointed it out to the guide.

"Fine horse," said I. "Very much fine,"

"Named Napoleon," said I. "Yah Vohl,"

"History repeats itself," said I. "A Napoleon of today drags the ruler of Austria about, and a Napoleon of another day also dragged the ruler of Austria about, only there's a slight difference in the method of dragging."

"Yah Vohi," said the guide blandly, "it is a very fine history, and is a very much old I knew he couldn't comprehend the subtlety of my argument, but I had my say, and when a woman has that she doesn't care much for the consequences.

Here are the finest street car horses I ever saw. They are sleek and fat, with bob tails and cropped manes, and they carry themselves like Kentucky thoroughbreds. It must be perfectly paralyzing to a well regulated Viennese when he comes to America and sees for the first time one of our gethic way of pictures and statuary, but it has enough to stock up soveral American cities. Its museum building, though, when completed, will be one of the finest on the continent. Much of the statuary here is in easts, and it has affected Dickey's nervous system. When we came into our room teday I noticed that quite a large piece of plastering had been knocked off the wall in our absence

"Scotts and garters," said I, "what's that?" "What's what!" said she. "Look there," said I, pointing to the brake.

I do not hesting to say that the guide book is correct, but with this emendation: that Hungary furnishes the beauty, while Vienna

Vienna is not known in Austria as Vienne Vienna is not known in Austria as Vienna, which is a very pretty name, but as Wien, which is a trightfully ugly one, and I can only account for it on the principle of trunsposition, which permits them to call the Danube "the beautiful blue," when it is the nastiest kind of a mid brindle.

When one goes east in Europe the Danube is usually the point where she stops as the limit, and it is the limit of our journey in that direction, and might as well be made the limit.

Our business was established in 1855, thirty-two years ago, on the corner of South Main and Wood streets, where we are still located. The above fact proves conclusively that we have attained marked success in catering to the wants of the public, and should be accepted as a sufficient guarantee for the future. ECONOMICAL HOMES. HOW THEY CAN BE BUILT AT THE PRESENT TIME.

Fail into-Modern Ways of Living Not. the Old Ways-Floor Plaus and Elevation of a House to Cost 62,500.

Indianapolis, Sept. 20.—One can build s otter house for a given sum of money at this side the fact that material and lubor are cheaper at this time than they have been in the past. This is because of the thought that is put into the pluming and arranging of dwellings. It is the thought that saves the money. There are other things which thought adds to a house; these are external and internal attractiveness; convenience, labor saving devices and arrangements. Thought helps to make Bousekeeping easier. cheaper at this time than they have been in

It frequently happens that a man and his wife go through life with the hope of building a better house "some day." They are conomical; they live carefully; they live in a small house; they are crowded. At last, by dint of hard work and careful management, enough money is accumulated to build the new home. This is the great event which has been thought about for many years.

The idea in building this house is invariaby to get something as different from the old souse as possible. It was square; the new hullding must be irregular. It had no front mil; the new house must have a large one. There were no grates in any of the rooms; in he new house there must be one in each. In the old building the rooms were very small; in the new house they must be very large. There was no perch before; now there must be one running across the front and along one side of the house. Altogether the idea of the old house and that of the new are in direct opposition to each other. In one instance they were crowded; in the other they have plenty of room. There can be no doubt about the abundance of room.

The building is finished; they move into it, about the first person to get out of it is the servent whom they had in the old house. She ees the amount of work which she will have o do. It was easy enough to sweep the old ouse with its small, compact plan. House-cooping was relatively a small matter, but with the habits of economy which rendered money house possible they will not hire a second girl. The work which is left over by the servant falis to the mistress. Strange as it may appear under such circumstances, it takes the mistress a long time to find out the cause of the trouble. It is the house. It was plunned with an entire disregard for the work which was to be done. It had not been thought of. The idea was merely to get something which was different from the disagree-able features of the oid home. They thought that everything would be easier and pleasanter and more agreeable in every way. The only thing the matter with the old house was they were too crowded. In the new they are not, but have an impossible amount of work to do every day. The difference between what they wish to do and what is done is repesented by fretfulness in addition to the nat-ral weariness at the end of the day. But what has this to do with architecture and economical house building? Simply this: The house which is economically planned is economical as to money, curpets, sweeping and strength. The architect may do a great ked for housekeepers by going through life To recur to the idea of economical bouse building in a direct sense it may be borne in mind that economy and good construction go hand in hand; that none of the conditions of permanency are sacrificed for the sake of cheupness. Of two houses which cost the same one may afford more conveniences and room to the occupants according as there is an avoidance of waste space and unnecessary naterial. Evidently one flue stack will cost less than four. Therefore, if a house can be constructed which has only one this stack,

SECOND STORY. ; but the demands of the housekeeper and those who live in the house are that the one stack afford the conveniences of the four. People do not like compromises in house building, especially when they are building a home. The compromises come easier when one is planning rental property. Evidently is given up to balls is more expensive than one which contains a smaller proportion of hall space. According as one is able to diminish the amount of passage room, and yet meet all of the conditions of good and economical bousekeeping, he can reduce the cost of the house as to its building, its furnishing and the amount of labor required in caring for it. Thus economy in construction and convenience and ease in general housekeepi movements go hand in hand. Parallel ille trations might be carried forward so as to include each detail of the house, but we will take up a practical illustration of this idea by calling attention to a house plan which is submitted herewith.

Before describing it, it may be well to say that it is designed to suit in the matter of cost and other conditions the family of moderate means, which, by the way, is so largely in the majority. For such a family there in the majority. For such a family there must be a sitting room, a parlor or reception room, a dining room and a kitchen and pantry on the first floor. Then above these should be what is usually called the family bedroom, and connected with it should be the rooms for the children, boys and girls, one for each. Then there should be a guest room, and isolated from this part of the house should be the servent's room. The hathroom. should be the servant's room. The bathroom should be accessible from all of the front living rooms.

The average household has the habit of living all over the house to a greater extent than it used to, and the awful stiffness of a parlor is not so apparent as in times past. In the plan given it is difficult to decide which should be used as a sitting room and which as a reception room, As now used parlor and reception room mean the same thing. A matter of this kind would be largely a matter of individual preference. In some instances the dining room and the one immediately in front of it would be used together as the sixting or living part of the house, in which case the room to the left would be the parlor. Then again there are those who would keep the dining room closed a good part of the time and would use the two front rooms to gether. Possibly the large one in front would be designated as the sitting room. Still that would not keep it from being used virtually as the reception room. The two would be used together as time and occasion dictated. The room which is lettered reception room contains the front stairway. This stairway lands near the front of the house on the second floor, for which reason we are enabled. to have the two rooms which are most used n each floor in the front part of the house We have the two front chambers above and the reception room and sitting room below.

If we had a long narrow stair hall constructed

The dining room, which is a large room, is connected with the front part of the house by sliding doors. It has a grate in one corner of it. On general principles a grate has no business in a dining room. It is nearly always at some one's back and makes him unconfortable at meal time. Being in the corner of the room the grate faces the table. Its location brings it farther from any one than it would be if located on a side wall. Hence it may be allowed. There is a porch in the rear of the dining room, and between the door leading to it and the door to the There are two windows at the end of this diring room. The door which passes into the pantry should be on double spring hinges, so that it will swing both ways. One can push against 1t and open from either side, and when it is released it will take its natural poin the usual way we would have the sitting room toward the rear and only a little alcove bedroom over the hall in front.

The pantry is a large one. Pantries in general may be regarded as a kitchen annex—a store room and preparing room. This pantry is a combination affair. It connects with the china closet by means of a slide. Aside from

s a emphourd with double doors at one end:

flour bin at the side, a pastry table next to it, and a refrigerator by the window. One reason for placing this refrigerator near the window is that a pair of steps and a platform window is that a pair of steps and a platform might be arranged on the outside so that the icerona could put in the ice without going through the kitchen. We go down cellar from this pantry, and it will be noticed that the cellar way is abundantly well lighted. It affords an easy approach to the cellar. We go to the second floor and the servant's room out of the kitchen.

There is a cellar under about one-half of era is a cellar under this house—the kitchen and dining room, It should have a cement floor and numerous windows for lighting it. The part under the kitchen could be used for a laundry, under the dining room for coal storage and furnace There could be an excavation under a part of the sitting room for vegetable storage. Why not out a cellar under the whole house It wouldn't cost a great deal more," has been asked many times. It does not cost a great deal more, but it costs a little more. It is the little things, the smaller economies, in a building of this kind which make the differ ence between an expensive house and a hous of moderate cost. Every foot of cellar space beyond what is needed for actual use is: hurden to the housekeeper. The arrangement ments than with the amount of space. We have a laundry room, a place for furnace and fnel, and room for vegetables, which is about all that can be used. From the cellar we can go up the stairway and into the kitchen, from the kitchen to the second floor, and from the econd tioor to the attic.

It is a large attic, a place for splendid rooms if one should need them. Under any circumstances this attic should be floored. There could be no better place for general storage, and at times room for drying clothes.
There are many things which might be said about this plan in a detailed way which would be of interest to those who would build. The kitchen arrangements might be considered, its ventilation described. It might be told how the plumbing apparatus is arranged so that it cannot freeze so long as there is just a little heat in the kitchen, and altogether a great many details could be a cluded in this description.

It very solden happens that two houses from the same plan are built in exactly the same way. While this plan has pleased a good many people there are many others who would not be attracted by it, who would not care to build this house as their home. The universal floor plan has never been mindo and never will be. There are general principles running through all plans which are valuable, and if rightly understood will contribute to the improvement of the homes of the people. A substantial frame house on this plan

A substantian transportation could be finished for $2,500.

Theretore, make good this golden opportunity and call without dolay on Dr. Lewin, who is onabled in an instant, as if by majer, to tell you any allment of your failing vision, point out the cause and adapt brilliant glasses peculiarly ground to sub every defect of the eye, which will aid in restoring and strengthening the eye-sight of the young and old.

During the many years he has practiced, he has GIVEN SATISFACTION and delight to thousands with cefective sight, and it is not at all surprising that everybody is full of praise for the Doctor, and he daily receives recommendations from prominent ladies and gentlemen all over the country.
